Dear Anita, We have been on the Galapagos Islands for a week. I have travelled to lots of places, but there is no better place than the islands. It's like entering a zoo without walls or windows. Most animals here are not afraid of people. Bruce, Nancy and I can see them up close. Some unusual animals live here. They don't live anywhere else in the world. This makes these islands very special. The Galapagos Islands are right on the equator (赤道). There are very different areas here. The coastal area has trees and plants that can live in salty water. The humid (湿润的) area is located in the higher places of the islands. More rain falls in this area because of the height of the hills. The dry place covers the largest part. Many kinds of cactus (仙人掌) live here. Here the world looks like a desert. It's not like a tropical (热带) area at all. There is also a transition (过渡) area. It's between the dry area and the humid area. There is a mix of plants here. So the islands have a little bit of every kind of landscape. The Galapagos Islands are so great that we don't want to leave. I have taken lots of photos. I'll show you after we return home. See you soon. Yours, Cecily

33. Who wrote this email?
A. Anita. B. Bruce. C. Nancy. D. Cecily.
34. When did the writer get to the Galapagos Islands?
A. 3 days ago. B. 5 days ago. C. 7 days ago. D. 9 days ago.
34. What do we know about the animals on the Galapagos Islands according to the email?
A. Many of them are kept in cages. B. Some of them only live on the islands.
C. Most of them are scared of people. D. A few of them are very good at hunting.

35. Which picture probably shows the landscape of the Galapagos Islands?

An old farmer is working outside his farmhouse. D'Artagnan comes out of the house.

D'Artagnan: Father! I would like to speak to you.

Father: Yes, my son! What is it?

D'Artagnan: Father, the time has come when I must leave the farm. [His father smiles, but secretly.]

The farm is good for you, but it is boring for me. I must go and realize my dream in Paris. I know you will wish me well.

Father: Yes, my son, I will wish you well. It is a sad day for me and for your mother, but I knew it would happen one day, so I am prepared. Wait here.

The father goes into the house. A moment later, he returns. He is carrying a letter and a small bag. The mother also comes out. She is carrying a small bottle.

Father: Here is a letter for you to take to Paris.

D'Artagnan: Thank you, dear Father! I will guard it with my life! But surely, that is not all!

Father: No, no! How will you get to Paris? It is a long way to walk! That is why I am giving you Buttercup, my favourite horse!

D'Artagnan: [Very unhappy, but secretly.] Buttercup! How wonderful!

Father: My son, many people laugh at this horse because he is so yellow, but he is a very good horse. He was born in my stables (马厩) and has lived here all his life. It's a good horse, so don't ever think of selling it. Treat it with kindness and respect.

D'Artagnan: Thank you, dear Father, I am so happy! [He isn't.]

Mother: And I have something for you, too, Son. It will be very useful.

D'Artagnan: Mother, I did not expect a gift from you.

Mother: You are my son, too, and I am just as pleased to see you go as your father is. I mean, I am just as proud of you as your father is! Take this bottle of ointment. It will help you cure all kinds of wounds and illnesses.

D'Artagnan: Thank you, dearest Mother. And now, dear parents, if there is nothing else [Looking at the small bag that his father is carrying], I must be off. Wish me well!

Father: No, wait! I have a little money to give you. It is all I have, but I will gladly give it to you because you are going away! [He gives D'Artagnan the small bag.]

D'Artagnan: Thank you, dear Father. I know it is not much, but I will use it wisely.

Father: Take Buttercup and go! Have a long and happy life! Goodbye!

Mother: Goodbye, Son! Don't forget your mother! Goodbye!

D'Artagnan: Goodbye, Father! Goodbye, Mother!

The father and mother smile at each other and go back into the house. D'Artagnan goes to the stable and leads out a yellow horse. He gets on it and rides slowly away.

五、阅读与表达（共 5 小题，每小题 2 分，满分 10 分）

阅读短文，回答短文后的五个问题。

The world is full of amazing nature and discoveries. Here are two examples.

Rainbow mountains Danxia landform

In Gansu, China, there is a row of mountains covered in coloured stripes. There are deep red, yellow, blue and green colours. They are more beautiful after the rain. These mountains look as if a rainbow has been painted over them. Some people have said, “These are the rocks where rainbows sleep.” These amazing rainbow mountains could be the imaginary landscape of an alien planet, but they are right here on Earth.

Titanosaur

For a human baby to grow to adult size takes many years. Not so, however, for a titanosaur baby. Titanosaurs are the largest dinosaurs that ever lived. By studying the fossils (化石), scientists think that at birth titanosaur babies weigh as much as a human baby at birth. In just a few weeks, however, they were at least the size of a large dog. By around 20, they were bigger than buses. There are no other animals in the world that have started small and reached such a large size so 64. How amazing it is to think that something beginning as a tiny egg could grow into one of the largest animals ever to walk round the world!

注：每题答案不超过 6 个词。

61. What colours are there in the rainbow mountains in Gansu?
62. When do the rainbow mountains in Gansu look more beautiful?
63. What are titanosaur?
64. What word(s) can be put in 64?
65. Please write a proper title for the passage.

六、书面表达（满分 20 分）

One possible version:

To read or to watch?

The picture shows two students with different choices. A girl is reading a book carefully because she likes thinking deeply. A boy is watching videos on his computer to save time and understand the story better.

I prefer to read classical books myself. Last summer, I read Robinson Crusoe. At first, it was hard, but when I kept reading, I felt like I was sailing on the sea with Robinson.

Reading makes me think about life and helps me grow up bravely. Although watching videos is fast, books give me more feelings and memories that I will never forget.
